

Being Virtuous

Bringing Virtue, Freedom & Accountability

What does becoming the best version of yourself while making a difference in the lives of others through the choices that you make mean to you?

In what ways have your actions (taking a whole life view) had a notable and meaningful impact on others?

In what ways are you experiencing the "freedom to" become the best version of yourself?

Are there other ways in which you can increase your personal freedom to become your best?

In what ways does "freedom from" those influences holding you back apply in your life?

What opportunities are there for you to free yourself from additional constraints preventing you from becoming your best?

In what situations do you take accountability, particularly when outcomes are not favorable, others may find out, or you may experience some personal fallout?

In what situations can you take greater accountability for your own outcomes or for a group or a project that you oversee?

Are your life and the important choices you make characterized more by love or fear?